Pemberton Greenish Moves from 45 Pont Street to 45 Cadogan Gardens

Wednesday 10 March 2010, Chelsea, London – Pemberton Greenish is moving from 45 Pont Street, SW1 to brand new offices at 45 Cadogan Gardens, SW3 on Monday 15th March 2010.

Pemberton Greenish has been a continuing partnership since 1775 and in that time has moved only four times. The firm started life in Hatton Gardens but in 1817 moved to Lincoln's Inn Fields, remaining there for the next 142 years until moving to Gray's Inn in 1959. The move from the Inns to Chelsea in 1975 was extremely successful and after 35 years at 45 Pont Street, the firm has decided to move again.

This latest move marks the radical need for more space to continue the firm's steady, organic growth. Remaining in the heart of Chelsea is important to the firm's development because it is home to so many clients on both the property and private client side of the business.

The new office is a wonderful development by the Cadogan Estate. Behind the retained 19th century façade of what were previously the offices of Peter Jones, Cadogan has created 21st century office accommodation of the very highest standard. It is a clear reflection of the firm that Pemberton Greenish has become and an unambiguous statement for how the partners and staff see the future of the practice.

Speaking about the move Senior Partner Damian Greenish said: "We have been planning this for a long time. We have enormous attachment to 45 Pont Street but we have outgrown it and we needed to move on. Pemberton Greenish continues to grow and a new home had to have room for the expansion towards which we are working.

Our clients will continue to enjoy the friendly, efficient service from excellent lawyers that they expect and deserve. I very much hope that over the coming weeks and months you will not only come to visit us in our new home but when you do you will see just how the firm is meeting the challenges of providing the best class of legal services in the 21st century."
